

GA DNR Game Wardens Enforcing Social Distancing Relative to Outdoor Recreating

Governor Brian Kemp and Department of Natural Resources Commissioner Mark Williams said Georgia DNR Law Enforcement Game Wardens will start enforcing social distancing on all lakes and rivers in Georgia.

As we deal with the effects of coronavirus with school and business closures, people are eager for a change in scenery after days at home. They are traveling to nearby counties, heading outdoors for fresh air, and maximizing family time. Some are going to vacation homes, and others are hitting the lake, hiking trails, or campgrounds. While doing so, people are urged to stay mindful of social distancing, follow best practices, and avoid large crowds.

The Department of Natural Resources will enforce the Governor's executive order limiting large gatherings with officials patrolling bodies of water and campgrounds. Game Wardens are monitoring coves where people tend to congregate and, if necessary, using bullhorns to tell people to comply with the order. Officials will approach people in violation of the order and demand compliance for the well-being of our citizens and state.

Please stay safe, enjoy your time outdoors, and follow directives to mitigate the spread of COVID-19. Together, we can flatten the curve and stop the spread of coronavirus.
